

HVS Executive Search announces two senior appointments

Chris Mumford

Dave Mansbach

Global executive search specialist HVS Executive Search has announced the appointment of two senior executives within the business.

London-based Chris Mumford becomes President, Europe, Middle East & Africa, from his previous role as managing director. Mumford will head the company's London office while supporting those in Moscow and South Africa. He also becomes the EMEA representative for global key accounts and will spearhead the opening of new offices in the region.

New York-based David Mansbach, previously Partner, North America, has been appointed President, the Americas. He will head the New York office while directing the company's new South/Latin America operation.

Both Mumford and Mansbach will work closely with CEO Keith Kefgen in the management of the business and in boosting overall enterprise value. The reorganisation comes in response to the global nature of HVS's client needs.

Said CEO Keith Kefgen: "As our practice has grown, so has our geographic reach and capabilities. To serve our global clientele, we have added a regional structure to our platform. Dave and Chris are well deserving of their promotions and I look forward to working with them on global expansion."
